ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

SCHOOL BOARD.

As required by law, the following report is respectfully submitted for the year ending March 1, 1893 :

SCHOOL No. 2.

This school began April 11, and continued with the exception of one week, when it was closed on account of the illness of the teacher, until June 24—a period of eleven weeks. Whole number of scholars, eleven. Teacher, Mary E. Butell, of this town. Only one pupil, Annie M. Little, is reported as not being absent or tardy. Three are recorded as having refrained from whispering during the term, and their names are here given, Marion Hoitt, Martha Wentworth, and Annie M. Little. The fall term began September 7 and was eleven and three-fifths weeks in length—closing November 23. Teacher, Mary L. Thomas. Whole number of scholars, twelve. Iva F. Whittaker, Henry T. Batchelder, and Arthur A. Batchelder were not absent or tardy during the term.

SCHOOL No. 3.

The spring term of this school was kept by Mary L. Thomas, and was eleven weeks in length, beginning April 11 and ending June 24. Whole number of scholars, sixteen. The names of six—Lena F. Calef, Verta A. Smith, Nellie Foster, Bechtel Scott, and Chester A. Crowell are upon the roll of perfect attendance. The fall term, commencing September 5 and closing November 23, was eleven and three-fifths weeks in length. Whole number of pupils, eighteen. Teacher, Mary E. Butell. Pauline Calef, Willie C. Adams, and Chester A. Crowell were not absent or tardy during the term.

SCHOOL No. 4.

The spring term of this school was taught by Carrie F. Adams, of Haverhill, Mass., who was the teacher for the two previous terms. It began April 11 and continued until June 24, being nearly eleven weeks in length. Whole number of scholars, eight—one-half of whom, Bertha L. Hoitt, Ralph Freeman, Lizzie M. Hoitt, and Nellie A. Hoitt are reported as not being absent or tardy. The fall term began September 12 and closed December 2, being eleven and three-fifths weeks in length. It was taught by Rose A. Todd, of South Newmarket, and was her first attempt at teaching. Whole number of scholars, seven, none of whom appear to have been neither absent nor tardy during the term.

SCHOOL No. 5.

The spring term of this school began April 11 and closed June 24, being eleven weeks in length. The whole number of pupils who attended was twelve. The names of Edwin E. Brickett and Arthur D. Goodrich appear upon the roll of perfect attendance for this term. The fall term was eleven and three-fifths weeks in length, beginning September 6 and ending November 23. Both terms were taught by Mary L. Noyes, of this town, and who had taught one term previously here. Whole number of scholars, eleven, all of whom seem to have been either absent or tardy once or more throughout the term.

The foregoing, together with the items to be found in the tabular statement herewith submitted, comprises substantially all that is required by our law in the annual report of the School Board. Such suggestions as they may think necessary on the management of our common schools and on the subject of education generally may also be made, and are customary, but it is extremely doubtful whether they have much, if any, lasting effect on the minds of those who are most intimately connected with and interested in the welfare and proper education of the young. Were it otherwise, we should not fail at this time to reiterate and emphasize the suggestions heretofore made in these annual reports. We should urge upon the minds of some of our teachers the necessity of maintaining better order in the schools under their charge. Whispering and moving about the school-room without permission should be positively forbidden, and laughing aloud might in most cases be dispensed with without any detriment to the school. Then, too, some of our schools have suffered on account of the irregularity of the attendance of their pupils, and in this respect our record is much behind that of previous years. There certainly can be no good excuse for all the absences that deface some of our registers this year.

Our school population is constantly changing from year to year, and for the first time in its history, perhaps, no school has been kept in the former district No. 1 during the year and where within the memory of the middle-aged of our citizens there were twenty-five or more scholars, only two or three could be found at the beginning of the present year, a number so small that it was not deemed advisable to maintain a school. In No. 5, which last year had only a single term of school and none at all during the year 1890, the scholars have increased in number, so that they have had the same amount of schooling as other sections of the town where schools have been maintained.

The statutes relating to schools are continually being amended and changed, so that it is almost impossible to keep track of them, and what was good law at the beginning of a year may not be so at the end, and it would seem as if every educational quack in the State was bent on having them altered so as to suit his own particular whim or fancy. For instance, as the law now is, or rather was at the beginning of the present year, no examination of candidates proposing to teach is required—the statute in relation to that subject having been entirely stricken out. They may, of course, bring testimonials of their fitness and ability from their former teachers, and also from others who are disposed to help them in obtaining situations ; but when we reflect on the ease and facility with which such recommendations can be obtained, we shall see how worthless and unreliable they are, and in fact, some of the poorest teachers we have ever met with have been the best equipped in this respect. The law in question had been on our statutes for nearly a century, we think. It had always worked well in practice, and in a great many instances had prevented incompetent and unfit persons from obtaining schools. No one, so far as we know, had ever complained that it was unreasonable or unjust, and why it should have been thus summarily repealed is a question more easily asked than answered.
